

Building Dreams. Powering Futures.

Adam Snavelly, President/CEO of The Poole and Kent Corporation, an EMCOR Company, helps ACE Mentor students with preparations to their design of the Tallest Building in Baltimore, the 2007 project challenge presented by the Baltimore Affiliate of the ACE Mentor Program. Six ACE teams, spent 6 months working on the project to prepare for ACE's Annual Presentation Night where the student teams unveil their projects to 200 family, students, teachers, and other professionals. Students pictured from left to right: Blair Simms, Theo Steward, Kevin Miller, Thomas Bianco, and Devron Johnson.

The nation's second largest industry—Architecture, Construction, and Engineering—is facing a critical shortage of skilled labor. As the largest corporation of its kind, EMCOR is dedicated to turning that challenge into rewarding career opportunities for high school and college graduates alike.

By working directly with kids and as an active supporter of the ACE Mentor Program, we're building something truly meaningful—the lives of young adults.
