

ACE MENTOR PROGRAM
ARCHITECTURE • CONSTRUCTION • ENGINEERING

Eun Young Kim
Assistant Professor Department of Interior Architecture & Design at the University of Tennessee in Chattanooga (UTC)

Eun Young Kim is an assistant professor at the Department of Interior Architecture & Design at the University of Tennessee in Chattanooga (UTC). She has a bachelor's degree in Housing & Interior Design from Yonsei University (in Korea), a master's degree in Interior Design from the University of Kentucky, and her PhD in Interior Architecture from the Yonsei University. As a design educator and research, she teaches various levels of design courses from Design fundamental to research method at UTC. Her research emphasizes the significance of patients' perceptions and experiences of the physical environments in hospitals. Her research interests also include the impact of community changes on residents' quality of life. Her current study involves investigating the role of residents' satisfaction in urban neighborhoods in Chattanooga.